An itty bitty Celebration of you

Hello from Betty!

In this book, Itty Bitty Betty Blob is worried about Picture Day at her monster school, Ghoulington Academy. Betty's just no good at making monster faces for the camera—she much prefers smiling, singing, and rainbows and dandelions! Luckily, on her way to school that fateful Picture Day, she'll meet some friends who will help reassure her that being herself is the very best thing to be—just like being yourself is the best thing for you to be.

That's why Betty is excited to celebrate the things that make you, well, you. Start by helping her decorate this cake that she baked in your honor. (Don't forget to write your name on the icing!)

Ghoulington Academy Trophy Room

What are some things that make you unique? They can be both silly and serious! If you're feeling stuck, try to remember any compliments you've gotten that made you feel good, or ask a friend or family member to share some things they love about you. Now inscribe the trophies below with your talents. Decorate them to make them as special as you are!

Picture Day Outfit

If you were brave enough to wear ANY outfit for Picture Day or Any Day without worrying about what others thought, what would it look like?

Describe and/or draw your perfect outfit in the picture frame.

Extra credit: Wear something from this outfit for your Next Big Thing! For instance, if your dream is to wear head-to-toe sparkles, how about wearing a sparkly temporary tattoo or a glittery pin? Sometimes being brave happens in little steps—and that's ok too!

Send a Blob-o-Gram!

It's your turn to celebrate someone else's uniqueness! Think of someone you know who you'd like to celebrate. Fill out Betty's board with a positive message—it can be something you appreciate about that person, or a thank-you note saying you're grateful that they're exactly who they are, or even an itty bitty bit of encouragement if they've been feeling down. Then cut out Messenger Betty and give or send her to your special person to make their day!
